

Government of the United States, that the partial preservation of the said laws, and the partial abolition of the Consular Courts by at least three years. An acceptable English translation of these laws will be presented of and within 15 days after the date of the ratification of the said Treaty. Then follow the stipulations as to the appointment of foreign lawyers as judges, it being here defined that only such law as shall be appointed as are qualified to be judges. These stipulations are to be introduced simultaneously with the enforcement of the new ordinances and so remain for twelve years.

Appended to the United States Treaty below is the Japanese Treaty. Note dated February 20th, this year, as follows:—Art. V. of this Treaty specifies that the Japanese Government may impose duties according to its tariff, instead of the importation of goods, imported into Japan from the United States of America; and Art. XIV. of this Treaty specifies that any American ships entering Japanese ports shall be treated on the same basis and light dues according to the same given in the Treaty; and Art. IV. of this Treaty specifies that the produce or manufactures of America from whom Japanese ships may be imported, shall not be charged with any duty other or heavier than the duty imposed on goods of the same class produced or manufactured in Japan. The Treaty also specifies that the Government and the citizens of the United States shall enjoy the special treatment of the most favored nation in all matters relating to the commerce of Japan, and that the Government of the Emperor of Japan. It is agreed above, but to maintain the tariff, if customs are imposed, a comparatively low rate of import duty as Japanese goods, and that no import duties on Japanese goods shall be levied from the payment of tonnage and light dues, so that dispute may possibly arise as to the true interpretation of this Treaty.

On the signature of the said Treaty of St. Petersburg, the Emperor of Japan, His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, hereby makes the following declaration for the purpose of removing any possibility of argument or dispute.—It is declared to be His Majesty's intention that the said Treaty
